I don't reward bad behavior or childish antics.

Even the wildest stallion can be broken.

Dean,

Let me show him what we're working on. Take him to what's being constructed. Include him in more things, more than just mission briefings. He might respond to know we're not just sitting idly.

Sincerely,

Not what I was expecting when I asked for your opinion.

Dean,

I think we were too late in getting him to cooperate with us. Forgive me for sounding out of line, but the Veluz ways weren't the best. This isn't a corporate entity or some government power we're dealing with, it's a 19yr old kid.

The damage may already be done, I'm not sure we can turn this around.

I think we need more time and we need to sit down and actually talk to him. We need to start treating him like he's on our side... like he's an actual person and not an object. So, when you asked for my professional opinion on him, there you have it.

Sincerely,

Pam Reed
